The movie is the adaptation of an Indian novel "Jurm" by Mohammad Umera. The novel was published in September 2013. The film tells us the story of two small teenagers, Meenu and Binni, who are supposed to be married to each other. Once they are forcibly separated, both start missing each other intensely. They try their best to reunite but their lives seem fruitless. Soft drama with a message that love .. can conquer everything! Even harsh realities that life thrusts upon you .. you just have to follow your heart .. take that risk ... find your courage . Keep you faith .. to make things work out . Be strong!

The film was released on 2 July 2014. The film received mixed reviews from critics. It has received 2.5/5 on IMDB and 3.8/10 on Koimoi.

Umera was slated to leave the film's screenplay, which he co-wrote with Rasheed of "Gajaraj", "Om Shanti Om" fame, till March 2013 due to difference over creative control issues. Umera's original screenplay was changed to the story as written by Rasheed. In December 2013, Umera converted his passion into a screenplay and approached Siddharth Abhishek of Madras Talkies to direct it. In February 2014, Madras Talkies announced that Rasheed had been replaced with Jeetendra Singh, a debutant director. Later, Director Jeetendra Singh also was removed and the project was taken over by debutant Mehul Kumar. The film was shot in Ambala and New Delhi. The first schedule of the film commenced on 8 February 2014. By late April, the second schedule had been completed, with principal photography having ended on 5 May 2014. The film's trailer went viral with over 1.3 million views in just five days of its release and over 40,000 likes and 3000 dislikes within a week of its release on YouTube. The film's title was confirmed as "Jurm" and it was released on 2 July 2014.
