

Investment in Uvita Real Estate Costa Rica

Costa Rica's real estate market has grown steadily for decades, and many experts feel this trend to continue due to Costa Rica's friendliness to foreigners and investors. Costa Rica's real estate market is booming as a direct result of the Costa Rican government's efforts to promote the real estate sector.

All individuals and private companies, whether domestic or foreign, can own land and property with 100% ownership in Costa Rica. The most important factor for real estate property is its location. Costa Rica's natural beauty is proving to be attractive to an increasing number of travellers and those looking for the perfect vacation. Therefore, the demand for rental and hotel accommodation in Costa Rica is steadily increasing.

Costa Rica enjoys a relatively low crime rate, is politically neutral, and has a relatively high standard but a low cost of living. There are few restrictions, but the main restrictions are physical occupancy and a 50-meter limit from the beach for oceanfront properties. Costa Rica's GDP is currently around 8%. This investment-friendly climate and favourable government policies are about to turn Costa Rica into the 'Silicon Valley of Latin America'. ## Why does investment in Land and Real Estate remain a lucrative option?

Land or real state housing always brings higher returns. If you land in an area with good infrastructure, communication, and proximity to nearby business centers, the price of land will be appreciated. It will turn into an excellent savings investment that guarantees higher returns in the future. Real estate investment can provide different benefits such as passive income, stable cash flow, tax benefits, diversification & leverage. The land will bring better returns than property. Buying real estate requires a lot of initial capital. This can be a bad investment if you don't get a good return. However, capital investment in land is less than in real estate.
